Can children recover from Autism? Ask Marcia Hinds and her son.

Every parent hopes they will have healthy, happy children. Unfortunately today, 1 in 50 children has autism and the number is growing. But an autism diagnosis doesn't have to mean "GAME OVER!"

Marcia Hinds, of Los Angeles, California, author of the book " I Know You're In There: winning our war against autism, knew there was something not right with her son.

"My son was diagnosed with autism at age four. That day changed everything. The doctor gave him and us a life sentence. We were told there was no recovery from autism. There was no cure.

"Ryan's doctor treated the infections and viruses that he believed were the cause of my son's autism symptoms. But medical intervention wasn't enough. In our search for a cure, I searched everywhere. I did find many snake-oil salesmen with the latest autism cures who took our money and then asked for more.

"Finally we found a doctor who thought differently. We used a multipronged approach to help him recover. He was received anti-viral, anti-fungal, immune modifiers, anti-depressants, Deplin (absorbs excess folic acids), prescription level iron supplements, and MTHR for gene mutation. He also went through applied behavioral therapy.

"Eventually he did everything the autism experts said he could never do. After graduating Magna Cum Laude with a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering, He earned his M.S. in Engineering Management and

"There is hope. Autism is not a developmental or psychiatric disorder. It is medical, treatable, and surmountable. If a doctor tells you there is nothing you can do, don't believe it! Never give up until you find the answers for your child."
